

Child Safety Legal Education and Information Project

---

A project by Tasmania Legal Aid

What is the project about?

The aim of the project is for Tasmania Legal Aid (TLA) to provide user-friendly information for different audiences and stakeholders on the child safety system, and some of the legal processes involved.

Why is this important?

The information and resources that TLA aims to develop has been identified as an area of need within Tasmania. It also aligns with TLA's purposes and values to support disadvantaged and marginalised Tasmanians by providing clear information in our commitment to aid the best outcomes for clients and the community.

The outcome of this project will assist a variety of stakeholders.

Who will the information/resources be for?

The resources created by TLA will assist stakeholders, such as:

- parents
- kinship (family) and foster carers
- children and youth in the child protection system
- social support workers and providers
- community groups
- health workers
- government organisations
- education providers and those working with children in schools
- lawyers working in the child protection system
- family violence and disability support services
- those from diverse cultural backgrounds, including Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people

Your input

TLA will consult with various stakeholders. Your input, as one of those stakeholders, is invaluable in assisting TLA to complete the project.
